“I enjoy reading this story to my grandson as much as he enjoys having it read to him. He can actually relate to the story. I began reading it to him at age three, and now at age four, he still loves me to read it to him. The story is very well written, and written on a subject that kids understand. This book would also be great for students in the early years of elementary school. I highly recommend this book for anyone with children or grandchildren. I look forward to reading future books by this author, to my grandson.”

A rhyming story about a child who just wants to feel the joy of jumping in the puddles.

Adorable illustrations bring this story to life for anyone who loves to make a big splash!

Tracy has also written a second book, Is God in the Mailbox. This story follows a young boy who is inspired by his mother’s statement that “God is everywhere.”
